CURRENT INFORMATION

ITEM ONE:

I received the following emailed information this morning. I understand that the temperatures could get down to 10 degrees this weekend. Please consider following Brady's advice, unless you have extreme confidence that your water lines are adequately insulated.

Today's email:

Good Morning, I just wanted to make you aware that there have been several water meters freeze and brake this past week out at the airport. To try and prevent further freezing to some of these shallow waterlines it would probably wise to reach out to some of the hanger owners and let them know that if the water in these lines aren't moving at all they will freeze with the temperatures we are experiencing. It never hurts to have just even a trick of water movement to try and avoid freezing. From what I have been told about years past is that there have been several lines out there freeze and leave hangers without water. So we just wanted to make you aware the issue to try and prevent further damage.

Thanks,

Brady Herd
